

Passed vs. Past

As with other homophones, words which sound alike, passed and past are often mixed even though they have very different meanings and functions. This post will help you identify which word to use in a particular sentence.

The term passed is the past and past participle form of the verb pass which means “to move or cause to move in a specified direction” or “go past or across; leave behind or on one side in proceeding.”

Past Tense:

“Senate Passed A Dumb And Dangerous Bill”
